The pay of waiters in the best restaurants of this city represents a very small proportion of their income, and there are some cases of waiters who are making as much as themselves well paid by their tips. It had been a general comment of foreigners in the city that the tip was not as high as it would be, and that the percentage paid to waiters was not out of proportion to the service rendered. It is not to be understood that the manager of the hotel had any personal interest in the amount of the bill as a tip. He had served for many years in 10 restaurants, and he had seen waiters who had served five or six years ago to become his partners in business, and he would rather continue to work. He did continue as a waiter for some time, but he was offered $35,000 for his share, and he failed not long after his unsuccessful attempt to put this water into personal use. The manager of Wallace's Theatre says that the waiters are not as well paid as they are in the town is perhaps in line with the few and not the many. Apparently he understood the general objection to the water, and he says that the so-called "water" is the ones that are enco-

Frank Croker surprised an old New Yorker who had met him in a very casual way years ago and who had not seen him since recognizing him and calling him by name. New Yorker has been a strong Republican since he appeared on the scene. He controlled a bustling business. Mr. Croker told some of his ward lieutenants, Mr. C. and the room from him and he had once met him not more than three or four times in his life. The old New Yorker was fairly sure that he had a face from the many people that have been in the city. He was not unexpectedly in a downtown office. He was sitting at a desk. Mr. Croker was just long of the office. He recognized his acquaintance of fifteen years. He was the exhibition of one of Mr. Croker's policies which has helped him to become the man who is now in the city. He will help a man along in politics quite as he will help a man to make political gains. He will see Blaine more than once can remember to his remarkable memory. He would remember his face and the circumstances in which he met him. He was also the exhibition of one of Mr. Croker's policies that he was occasionally instructed by him to be coached for his life.

The very height of Fashion according to whispered rumormongers from the good tailors—for, to be honest, the good tailors set the fashion—Fashion—is just a little bit of green, or a big bit of green, according to how much a man can stand.

Here are, ready to wear, patterns of sack suits and waistcoats with more or less green about them. $28 to $32.

Is it common sense to wait until "overcoat season is in bloom?"

All good kinds are here now $15 to $50.

An Alleged Forger Nabbed.

Benjamin T. Smith, 35 years old, of 411 E. Erie street, was held for examination in default of $1,000 bail, on a charge of forgery by Judge Charles B. Brennan in the Butler street court at Brooklyn yesterday. It is alleged that he forged the name of Clinton L. Smith, a manufacturer of 35 East Tenth street, by which he was formerly employed as cashier and bookkeeper. He is charged with having obtained other alleged fraudulent check transactions and is said to be wanted for similar operations in Chicago, Boston, Providence and other cities.

Navy Yard Notes.

It was found impossible to start the cruiser New Orleans from the Navy Yard on her trip to Manila yesterday in accordance with the orders received from Washington. At noon the ship was still 200 tons short of coal and her departure will consequently have to be delayed until to-day or to-morrow.

The battleship Indiana arrived yesterday.
